Has Come to Stay.

A member of the association in speaking of the meeting that has just come to a close said: "What the final results of all of this organization and systematic work will be it is not possible to tell, but it is plain that there is here a movement that has come to stay and one which makes it seem not unreasonable to look forward to a very large reduction in the death rate of tuberculosis, if not to an eventual stamping out of this disease. The National Association, so long as it continues to attract to itself the laity, will be building up a pub lic sentiment that will earry its program through to a successful issue. It will not be unnatural if the first victories of this ampaign of education will seem of a questionable value. "At first there will be an apparent increase in the death rate from tuberculosis following the observed facts, in some parts of the country where this work has been under way for some years. Then, a great increase in registering cases will take place, but these will be but additional encouraging signs, for they will show that there is heing secured what is often so badly lacking and what is always essential to good work along these lines, namely, a more careful diagnosis of consumption by physicians and an ability to detect it before it has advanced to a stage difficult to arrest.
